

ABSTRACT

A cooling fin structure is constructed by a thermally conductive sheet bent to form a heat radiation part and a welding part. The welding part is formed with a vacant region, which is defined by notches, openings or a slot, and the thermally
5 conductive sheet is welded to a substrate through the welding part.